

Going to a Wedding Ceremony

A Social Story

Today we are going to a wedding. It is an event in which two individuals who love each other, agree to spend the rest of their lives together, in front of their friends and family.

Some wedding are held in Churches,
some wedding are held at other places.

At weddings there is usually a bride and a groom. They sometimes have friends with them called “bridesmaids and groomsmen”. At times children are in the wedding party as well. They are called flower girls and ring bearers.

At weddings we listen to the person marrying the bride and groom.

During church I must sit quietly while the ceremony is going on.

If I am having a difficult time at the wedding I will quietly get up out of my seat and go to the back of where the ceremony is taking place so I can compose myself.

Sometimes there are lots of people at a wedding, sometimes there are few people at a wedding.

People at a wedding are usually happy for the Bride and Groom.

We can say things to the Bride and Groom like: “Congratulations” or “Thank you for sharing your special day with us” or something else that is a compliment.

Or “you look very beautiful today” to the Bride

Or “you look very handsome today”
to the Groom

It is a very great honor to be invited to someone's wedding, it means that I am a special person in their life.
