

Parent-Teacher Conference

A Social Story

Today we are going to parent-teacher conferences. It is an event in which parents get to really sit down and talk one-on-one with their children's teachers.

It is usually held at my child's classroom in their school.

In a parent-teacher conference, the teacher will show my child's schoolwork to me. It is also a time in which I can ask my child's teacher important questions.

It is important for me to let the teacher speak first. I must listen to them and write down any questions that I have.

It is also important for me to ask questions such as: “Is my child working up to his ability?” or “What can I do to help develop my child’s weak areas?” or “What is my child like in class?”

If I am having a difficult time I will ask the teacher politely if we could take a break. I will then get up and step outside the classroom so I can compose myself.

At the end of a parent-teacher conference, it is important to talk to my child about how the meeting went. Let them know that I am there if they need help or want to share schoolwork with me.

It is also important to keep in touch with the teacher, so that I and the teacher will be kept up to date on how my child is doing inside and outside of the classroom.
